

PEER REVIEW

Singh G. (2020) Climate change and childhood. Sushruta J Health Policy & Opin vol 13; issue 2: ePub 09.04.20 DOI: 10.38192/13.2.3

Shraya Pandya
Queen Marys University of London, UK
ha17323@qmul.ac.uk
Completed 26.05.2020

Cite as: Pandya, S. (2020) Peer review of 'Singh G. Climate change and childhood.'
Sushruta J Health Policy & Opin vol 13; issue 2: ePub 09.04.20 DOI: 10.38192/13.2.3

Recommendations

Accept

Recommendations to the Authors

The author has demonstrated an awareness for a relevant topic in this current climate, whilst keeping the paragraphs coherent and providing a strong argument throughout the article.

The writing style throughout was engaging and thought-provoking, whilst also being an easy read. References are also clearly cited via the Vancouver referencing system and written in the correct format. This article has been written to a good standard and it does reference back to previous literature. The author has clearly set aims to improve the relationship between healthcare and climate change, which concludes the article well, giving the reader a sense of direction of where changes can be made.

Overall, this article was insightful and emotive, providing a strong and clear message throughout: with climate change, comes changes to the way medicine will be practiced, as well as the duty of care towards patients.